

TALES WORTH RETELLING

Mr. Dean, the head of a large manufacturing business, built up his success by his own dogged and persistent toil. He had never felt that he could spare time for a vacation. Not long ago he decided that he was getting along in years and was entitled to a rest. Calling his son Ellis into the library one evening, he said: "Ellis, I've worked pretty hard for quite a while now and have done pretty well, so I have about decided to retire and turn the business over

"But I don't know you, madam," the bank cashier said to the woman who had presented a check. The woman however, instead of saying haughtily, "I do not wish your acquaintance, sir," merely replied, with an engaging smile: "Oh, yes, you do, I think. I'm the 'red-headed old virago' next door to you, whose scoundrelly little boys are always reaching through the fence and picking flowers. When you started for town this morning your wife said: 'Now, Henry, if you want a dinner fit to

Sir William Harcourt. He was about to get into a hansom when a friend, passing in a brougham, offered to give the right honorable gentleman, whose avoirdupois was considerable, a lift to his town house. Sir William accepted the offer and gave the disappointed Jehu a shilling. "Only a bob, guv' nor?" he asked ruefully. "Certainly," was the reply. "I never got into your cab." "But, guv' nor," responded the Jehu, "consider the fright you gave the boss."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Mr. B., who was dining out, had done lavish justice to the good things before him. By way of a grateful apology he remarked with a beaming smile directed toward his hostess: "I've always heard, ma'am, that the highest compliment one can pay the housekeeper is to eat heartily. You observe that I have been exceedingly polite." "Thank you, Mr. B.," smiled back the hostess. Indeed, I think that you have carried politeness to the point of flattery."—New York Evening Post.
